Graft in Local Police Department Being Exposed By Peters

Attorney Peters—"In this case the informers' fees form a lurid path of avarice punctured with ten dollar gold pieces."
Judge Robinson—"In San Francisco they call that graft."
Attorney Peters—"Shades of Abe Rueff."

That there is an organized system of graft in the Honolulu Police Department has been strongly intimated by the testimony of witnesses in Judge Robinson's court for the last day or so. The case is that of Yamashita, a Japanese arrested for selling liquor without a license and has been occupying the attention of this court for the last two days. Attorney E. C. Peters is representing the defendant, while Deputy County Attorney Milverton is prosecuting the case. Several months ago several police officers, with the aid of Kawamoto Kitaro, a Japanese informer, caught Yamashita in the act of selling beer, or at least, this is the story they tell. The direct testimony of the witnesses subpoenaed by the prosecution, who are those men who made the arrest, has been made to revert almost in favor of the defense on account of some of the statements made. To show that their testimony, in behalf of the prosecution, was anything but valuable, Attorney Peters has become a second Henry, and is disclosing one graft situation after another—plain, easy, "soft-ouch" graft it is, too—and before many more moons there will be probably instituted an investigation.

As an illustration—one of the police officers while testifying on the stand, said that he had paid out about $70 to Kawamoto Kitaro for his work as an informer. Kitaro was then placed on the stand and swore that he had only received between $15 and $20 as informers' fees. The significance of this is apparent, when the method of paying informers is known. Police officers' turn in their expense accounts to Sheriff C. P. Iauka, and receive their money from him. It was stated on good authority this morning in the Judiciary building that the graft, whatever there might have been in the past, had never been one iota to what it must be at the present time, judging from the wild testimony of officers and detectives on the stand.
